

The very fact that I am writing this to save a Christian oriented radio station is a good thing. The bible tells us that we, as Christians, will be subjected to persecution. And when we accept that persuction it will give glory to God. So in a way you, the FCC, are carrying through on God's plan.

Our local K-Love FM station is an integral part of serving the community because they provide an information resource. They broadcast information that Christians (and anyone else that wants to know) can't get anywhere else. What is the likelihood that K-Love would be replaced with Christian programming? I'm sure that is highly unlikely. So, in that instance you would be displacing a whole listening audience that gladly supports a station so that they can listen. K-Love offers activities and concerts here in the Oklahoma City area that few other organizations, businesses or other groups can offer. Without a way to extend that information to the public those activities would cease. These activities are always activites that uplift or better the community. In closing, K-Love inspires and supports this community to greater things than this world can offer.
